ORDER

The parties have submitted a stipulation and order of dismissal that calls for the Court's retention of jurisdiction of disputes under a settlement agreement that has not been filed or so-ordered by the Court. If the parties want the Court to retain jurisdiction of their agreement, it must be filed. If the parties wish all or portions of the agreement to be filed under seal, they must make an application for such treatment, demonstrating the need for confidential treatment and how such need outweighs the First Amendment and common law rights of access to judicial documents.
